

Mr. Bockbrader's experience as a landscape architect includes all phases of planning, landscape design, construction documentation, and construction management. His projects range from large scale master planning, commercial site development, institutional planning and residential landscape architecture.

In addition to Mr. Bockbrader's professional practice experience, he has been an Adjunct Instructor at Owens Community College and an instructor for adult education at The Toledo Museum of Art. Course content included an understanding of special composition and elements that define space in the landscape.

In 2001 Mr. Bockbrader participated in a Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design CPTED training program where he studied design principles and social behaviors that reduce crime in the public and private environments through special design and planning
